Universities, Colleges and Institutes

University of Toronto

Centre for Environment

<http://www.environment.utoronto.ca/>

Air, Water, Waste

The Institute for Environmental Studies (IES), the Division of the Environment (DOE) and Innis College's Environmental Studies Program of the University of Toronto have combined their resources to create a new graduate and undergraduate teaching and research entity called the Centre for Environment. The former graduate unit (IES) and the two undergraduate units have come together in order to strengthen and highlight the wealth of environmental teaching and research at the University of Toronto and to improve legibility and collaboration among environmental units. The Centre will continue to offer and expand its interdisciplinary courses, programs, research and activities as well as its collaborative relationships with other units at the University of Toronto. Current research covers areas such as water valuation, climate change, and waste management.

Intelligent Transportation Systems

Energy Efficiency

R&D Projects in Applications of Power Electronics for Electrotechnology, Automotive Industries, Distributed Power Generation and Storage, and High Energy Physics

Centre for Applied Power Electronics

<http://www.civil.engineering.utoronto.ca/English/ITS.html>

Energy Efficiency

The ITS Centre and Testbed provides an instrumented, multijurisdictional, multiagency transportation operations environment linked to university laboratories for real-world development, testing, and evaluation of ITS technologies and applications. It is also a meeting ground or melting pot for public, academic, and private practitioners and researchers to explore new approaches to transportation system management. It offers a site for private industry to demonstrate and evaluate its prototype technologies under live traffic conditions and an ongoing testing ground for Canadian ITS efforts.

Ryerson University

Geomatics and Virtual Environment Lab

<http://www.ryerson.ca/~junli/>

EMS

Geomatics and Virtual Environment Laboratory (GeoVELab) was established in 2002 to advance the innovative remote sensing, modeling and visualization technologies and integrate remote sensing, geospatial information systems and virtual reality technologies for innovative applied studies on urban environments.

The GeoVELab performs research in the following areas:

- development of innovative image analysis algorithms and software tools
- system integration and analysis
- application-oriented research and development

Institutes

MaRS Discovery District

www.marsdd.com

MaRS is a convergence innovation centre dedicated to accelerating the commercialization of new ideas and new technologies by fostering the coming together of capital, science and business.

Ontario Centres of Excellence - ETech

www.crestech.ca

Earth and Environmental Technologies (ETech), formerly known as CRESTech, a division of the Ontario Centres of Excellence (OCE) Inc., helps Ontario firms and organizations grow by finding solutions for their innovation challenges.

Ontario Centres of Excellence – Communications and Information Technology Ontario (CITO)

<http://www.cito.ca/>

CITO focuses on communications and information technology and creates a systematic framework for creating connections between innovators in academia, industry and business. Partnerships with these groups help us identify and support industrially relevant academic research and move the results into the marketplace – through existing companies or new spinoffs.

Centre for Energy

<http://www.oce-ontario.org/pages/aboutenergy.php>

The goal of the Centre for Energy is to help accelerate the development of new energy technologies, integrate new technologies into the energy system, and help industry develop information systems to manage energy markets.
